“Architecture from Archaeology” Special Display at Pilgrim Hall Museum

Pilgrim Hall Museum is pleased to present “Architecture from Archaeology,” a special artifact display as part of Massachusetts Archaeology Month on October 11 & 12, 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. The display is free with museum admission, (museum members and Plymouth residents are admitted free).

Archaeological digs in this region have helped historians and archaeologists to understand the architecture of 17th century Plymouth Colony. Even the smallest fragments from long lost structures can reveal clues as to how they were built and what they looked like. Objects recovered from 17th century sites in the greater Plymouth area from Pilgrim Hall Museum’s and other collections will be on display along with other objects, documents and photographs. See how archaeology has contributed to, and raised questions about, Plymouth Colony’s architectural history.

This special display generously sponsored by Brian and Barbara Alosi.
